STATE NEWS

Androscoggin.

The storm was severe at Livermore Falls, Sunday. The river rose rapidly and Mr. Record was obliged to keep a force of men at work taking out logs as the boom was unable to hold them. A dozen logs broken away and some logs were escaping, Monday morning. The river rose three or four feet at this place.

Tuesday morning a man, who lives in Lewiston was bitten in the right thigh by a savage dog and a severe flesh wound was inflicted which was dressed by a physician. This dog, which is a large black one owned by a man who lives in King block, is a savage brute. He, only a short time ago, attacked a little girl and nearly tore out one of her eyes. Lately he killed one of the fowls of his owners, who had to beat off the brute with an umbrella.

The towns of Livermore and East Livermore are in dispute in regard to settling on the division of the bridge across the Androscoggin, recently made free by the towns. Livermore claims that the part for them to keep in repair reaches to the deepest channel of the stream, which is near their shore, while East Livermore claims that the centre of the river is the middle and the bridge should be equally divided. Never since the purchase of said bridge has dispute run lower going on, but the matter has finally been left to the decision of special commissioners who have been appointed, one from Franklin county, another from Kennebec county and the third from Oxford county.

Cumberland.

Mrs. W. H. Merrill, of Portland, who attempted suicide by hanging Saturday afternoon, died Monday.

Monday night, Mr J H White, a young man twenty-one years old, committed suicide at the boarding house of Mrs Maguire, Portland, where he had been staying, by taking an ounce of aconite. Mrs. Maguire says the saw White when he took the aconite, about 8.30 o'clock, and immediately gave him mustard and water and got him vomiting. A doctor was called but could do no good. White dying at a little past ten o'clock. White for some time has been in the employ of Mr. John Murray.

Early Sunday morning, Joseph Mitchell, of Portland, while returning home through India street, stumbled over a man lying on the side walk in front of Coombs' boarding house, at forty-one India street. He was unconscious and was bleeding from several wounds in the head. He was taken into the house and a doctor called. The latter made an examination of the man, and found that he was severely injured. The man, whose name was James Cunningham, and who is the second mate of the schooner Carrie S. Hiller, arrived Saturday night at 10.30 with a shipmate. He had been asleep but a short time, when he dreamed that he was walked to the forward part of his vessel to fill a can. He got out of bed without waking his fellow, and crawled through the third story window, which was open, and fell to the brick sidewalk below. He will be moved to the State General Hospital. He belongs in Wilton, Maine.

Kennebec.

As the evening train was going past the State grounds last Friday evening, the engineer noticed a pre-arrested object and stopped the train just in time to keep from running over George Betts, who was lying dead drunk close to the track.

The question is now being discussed as to whether work on the new Augusta public building will be continued throughout the winter. As nearly all the stone and brick work will be finished this fall, work on the interior will probably be continued.

Phebe C. Ellis was born January 3, 1707. She still lives on the house in which she was born, in Sidney, twelve miles from Augusta. She married William D. Ellis in 1810. They lived happily together until 1871, when death separated them. She is the mother of ten children, eight of whom arrived at adult age. Although over ninety years old, she is very active. She has in her home an old-fashioned loom. For years she has woven flannel, table linen, sheeting and carpeting. Last fall she wove for one person forty yards of flannel. She is very busy. Her eyesight is very good, yet she seems strongly impressed with the idea that she will soon be blind.

Kennebec county leads the world in pistol shooting. Mr. F. E. Bennett, who won the match with Ira Paine this summer, thereby gaining the championship of the world, is a native of Hardy. In the fall, competition at Walnut Hill, near Boston, the first prize in the pistol contest was taken by W. W. Bennett, a brother of F. E. Bennett. The second prize was won by J. B. Fellows, who went to Boston several years ago from Augusta; and Captain Choate, who shot under the name of W. Scott, captured the third prize. Although Captain Choate has used his rifle a good deal, he has had no practice for years with a revolver, having tried it but twice previous to his entering the competition at Walnut Hill. Captain Choate also won a prize in the two-hundred-yard rifle match, and has well sustained the reputation of the Maine militia in the use of the rifle. The captain, on his return, will be immediately challenged by several Augusta shooters who think they know something about the way a pistol should be held.

Oxford.

The West Oxford Educational Association will hold its annual meeting at Lisbon on Friday and Saturday, Nov. 2 and 3. Five entertainments will be provided for ladies, and all may take advantage of half-fare rates on the railroad. There will be several speakers from abroad, and many of our best teachers will produce papers. The State superintendent of schools will be present, and a very interesting meeting is expected.

Waldo.

An effort is being made to convict Mr. E. F. Hussey's cattle depository in Belfast, into a shoe-factory to be owned and operated by a stock company. The building is well located and constructed for such a purpose, being 40x70 feet, three stories high and well finished. The building and lot cost $2,500 but Mr. Hussey will have it in at $1,500 taking $1,000 of the company's stock.

The sons of Mr. Alexander Cummings, of Thorndike, aged eighty-seven years, who walked a mile to vote at the last election, have presented their father with a fine horse and carriage as a token of their appreciation of his vote cast for Harrison and Morton. The old gentleman is still quite hale and hearty, and is a staunch Republican.

Short Cuts.

Mr William Warren left an estate worth nearly $300,000.

Sarah Bernhardt has got a new pet. It is a large green lizard which crawls about her neck and shoulders in a way to startle the beholder.

A New York girl dropped dead on Wednesday, two hours after having become engaged to be married. It is supposed her death was caused by an attack of heart disease, brought on by joy.

Pauline Hankrah, otherwise Miss Harkness, the American girl who recently gained an enviable reputation in Germany as a violin-player, has married a lawyer at Weimar, and will be heard no more in public.

The Duchess of Hamilton, whose dairy at Chiswick, Suffolk, is probably the most complete establishment of the kind in Great Britain, has engaged an expert to teach butter and cheese making at a school which is to be opened in connection with the dairy.

Rev. Charles E. Stowe, son of Harriet Beecher Stowe, will soon publish a life of the author of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." Kirk Monroe, a former editor of Harper's Young People, and an editorial writer on the New York Times and the Sun, is associated with Mr. Stowe.

Robert Lewis Stevenson's friends in Bournemouth are in the belief that he does not intend to return to that country, but means finally to settle in America. A certain amount of support is given to this idea by the fact that the novelist's residence in Skerryvor had been leased by a family.

Prof Harkness, who was lately in charge of English literature at the Jesuit College in Boston, started some six weeks ago to visit relatives at Orange, N J. He called upon friends in New York three weeks ago, stating at the time he was suffering from a nervous disease. He has not been seen since.

A Brooklyn electrician has discovered a way to stop the ear-splitting buzzers. He has attached a wire to the back fence, and when the cats alight and begin to sing their tuneful ballads he turns on the battery. The cats are not injured, but they are so surprised that they are mellowed to let the fence alone thereafter.

A railway train has just been constructed in France for the Emperor of China. It consists of six carriages, three of which are for the Emperor's own use. They are magnificently decorated and each of them contains a throne. A small table for opium-smoking is a barbarous piece of furniture that stands in front of each throne.

Mrs Mona Caird, who started the discussion on "Is marriage a failure?" spends most of her time on a large estate in Hampshire, dividing her time between superintending her farm and performing literary work on a type writer. She is the author of two or three novels, and is as bright in conversation as she is radical on all social questions.

On adjoining farms, twenty miles from Birmingham, Alabama, live Mrs. Jessie Woods and Mrs. Rebecca Graham, sisters. The former is one hundred and two years old, and the latter, ninety-three. The two old ladies were born within five miles of where they now live, and have never been out of the country. They have not been ten miles from home in fifty years. Neither of them has ever seen a railroad train or any modern invention.

Mr. Alvan Clark, the manufacturer of the great Lick telescope lens, received a letter from the president of the University of Southern California, located at Los Angeles, last week, asking for information as to a 40-inch lens, and intimating that an order for a telescope to equip that at the Lick Observatory would soon be made. Figuring he can mount such a lens if he can obtain glass of the proper size, and that the cost would be between $400,000 and $500,000.

"I've found the best cosmetic there is," said one of a party of young New York ladies. And then she explained: "It is just the simplest article you ever heard of. It is soothing, takes off sunburn, and is just perfect. It is the juice of watermelon. After being out in the summer's sun it was awfully nice to bathe one's face in the water from both the pulp and rind. My maid always has some ready for me to use, and I can't think what I shall do when watermelons are out of season."

A Tribute of Respect.

At a regular meeting of the Eagle Engine Company, held at Engine Hall, Orono, on Tuesday evening, October 2, 1888, the following resolutions on the death of P. W. Madden, were unanimously passed:

Whereas, it has pleased Almighty God to remove from our midst our trustworthy friend and ever ready comrade, P. W. Madden, and

Whereas, it was with feelings of profoundest sorrow that we assisted bear the memory of him who has borne his share of our trials, experiences and hardships, and

Whereas, we deem it fitting and appropriate that his memory and our appreciation of his brotherly qualities should be inscribed on the records of our company, therefore,

Resolved, That we extend to the family of the deceased our heartfelt sympathy in the great loss they have sustained.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of the deceased and the same be published in the Bangor papers.

The Owl Club Reunion.

[Correspondence of the Whig and Courier.]

The ladies of the Orient Owl Club celebrated their fourth anniversary on Friday evening, October 5, at Temperance Hall, which they had tastefully decorated. A few friends were invited to enjoy the entertainment prepared by the members of the club, consisting of original articles and singing. The address of welcome was delivered by the President. Undoubtedly the article worthy of most praise, was the original poem, "The Chatter Scale," composed and read by Miss Marie Moore, who also composed the Club Ode which was sung by the club. After the literary exercises, a beautiful repast was served to the guests by the ladies of the club; then came toasts. The first pronounced by the President, Mrs. C. B. Foster, was "Our Absent Members," and Miss Moore, as founder of the club, called upon to respond, which she did in a pleasing manner. Toasts were then toasted, and Mrs. C. E. Foster and referring to the benefit and pleasure derived from the study of his writings, by the ladies of the Owl Club. Ornithology was treated by Mrs F. E. Sprague in an entertaining manner. Our American Authors was the next subject considered. Mrs A. M. Burton giving a pleasing reply. The last toast was "The Gentlemen," responded to by Mrs. W. H. Steward in a complimentary manner, acknowledging that the Owls agreed with Pope that "An honest man is the noblest work of God." The President invited the gentlemen guests to make remarks; those who responded to the invitation as they were called upon, were Mr. H. B Hackett, W. J. Wood, Esq., Dr. C. B. Foster, Professor Barton, Mr. F. E. Sprague, Mr W. M. Steward and others. So ended the fourth anniversary of the Owl Club, and the unanimous verdict is that the members are entitled to much praise, as each acquitted herself so well. May the Owl Club and each member enjoy many happy anniversaries.

Bulb Planting.

The best time to plant bulbs is in fall, for, if put out early in the season, they have a chance to become thoroughly established before the coming of cold weather, and are ready for work in spring.

Spring set bulbs will generally bloom the first season, but they will be late, and will not produce as fine flowers as if put out in the fall.

Plant beds of bulbs in september, if possible. If set out then they will have completed their formation of roots before the time of the season. Later set ones will not have done this, but if it is not possible to put them out before November, plant then, rather than wait till spring, for even after the coming of snow the bulbs will make some preparation for next spring's work.

The best bulbs for bedding, because the hardiest, are tulips, hyacinths, crocuses, snowdrops and crown imperials. The new plant, said to be hardy in florists who have more regard for sales than for facts. Hyacinthus candicans, is not hardy in northern latitudes, and should not be put out till spring. As it is a summer bloomer, it does not matter if planted quite late.

In making beds for bulbs two things are of great importance. These are:

First, good drainage; second rich soil.

Bulbs will not do well in a soil in which water is allowed to stagn. If the bed is low, and water is retained about the roots in spring, you may get one tolerably good crop of flowers, but the following year you will find that the blooms are small, and the plants have an unhealthy appearance, and examination will show that the bulbs are diseased.

Therefore, drain the beds well if they have not good drainage into ally.

This is easily done by digging out the soil to a depth of a foot or better two feet, and filling in with several inches of stone, brick, old cans, anything that will hold the soil up when you return that which has been thrown out and keep it from settling back into a compact mass. Putting in this material will raise the bed to a height which will enable it to shed most of the water resulting from melting snow, and what percolates through the soil will pass off among the crevices below, and away from the roots of your bulbs.

If the soil is heavy or compact, make it light by stirring it over well before you put it back into the bed. Mix your manure with it thoroughly when you do this. The finer and mellower it is, the better flowers you will have. The best manure to use is that which is obtained from old yards where cow-manure has been thrown out and lain until it has become rotten. It will be black and friable, and can be thoroughly incorporated with the soil. If it does not make it light enough add some sand. Old mortar is good.

A bed for each kind of bulbs, by itself, will be found more satisfactory than mixed.

There are several varieties of tulips, some very early, some a month later. Some are single, others double. Some grow low, others are quite tall. You can find out all about the habits of the plants by reading the catalogues carefully.
